Searching the “traditional” catalogue can be very useful when you do not have precise references: the search by fields allows you to combine several parameters in order to perform more structured searches (truncated words with, f.e., a starting year).

Searches performed in OpenWeb are google-like and easier: they are advisable when you have more precise references (pages are in italian)

what you will find

- Most of the Libraries holding (books, films, music, journals, thesis)
- E-journals subscribed by our University (Journal of economic literature)
- Many free online journals (World Bank, The complete development world report online)
- 300 E-books published by Il Mulino (in italian)
Pavia Union catalogue
what you won’t find

- Most of the material acquired before 1990:
  - to retrieve material published before 1990 it would be useful searching a card catalog: it still exists in several libraries (Biblioteca Universitaria, whose collections gather about 507000 books and 6600 periodicals)

- Usually the articles (this is not true for the Library of Musicologia in Cremona)

- Table of contents (books)

hints for searching

- the truncation wild card $ is helpful to search for words that begin with the same sequence of characters: econom$, behavi$

- the advanced search allows you to
  - set a more structured search: you can insert different parameters in different fields using boolean operators: f.e. (TI=LABO$) NOT (TI=LABORATOR$) or (((TI=NONPROFIT) OR (TI=NO ANDF TI=PROFIT)) OR (TI=NON ANDF TI=PROFIT))
  - select a language, a starting or a between date of publication, material type, a “grouping” or a Library (pay attention: these 2 last selection do not retrieve, f.e., all the electronic resources – e-books or e-journals)
  - sort by date the results of your search

You can always limit or filter your search after a first selection is made

Please DO NOT:

- Search with too many words (avoid articles and common words, just use significant or important words)
- Search by keyword without using operators
- Search by subject using incorrect terms (this search has to be performed in Italian using controlled terms – “macroeconomics” won't retrieve anything)
- Search using abbreviations. The catalogue is not google and won’t be able to complete the words. If you don’t remember the correct typing of a word please use truncation wild card $.
- Search a title of an article or a chapter
Searching without references

- Traditional catalogue: use the truncation wildcard $ (searches for multiple forms of a word, such as labour, labor, behaviour, behavior)

- Print and online reference works, such as International encyclopedia of the social & behavioral sciences

- Darwinbooks: italian e-books published by Il Mulino, you can search in full text

- Research platforms subscribed by UniPV: Web of science, Econlit, Lexis-Nexis

- Free utilities: SSRN (Social science research network), RePEc (Research Papers in Economics), Google books, Google scholar
All the resources subscribed by the University of Pavia are connected with LinkUP, an OpenURL “link resolver” based on SFX®: Link UP performs the search for you, helping you to discover whether the articles you have retrieved are owned, and in what form. (see more from the web)

It also has an important utility: a list of the e-journals subscribed by the University of Pavia or free online.

The Business Case for Corporate Social Responsibility: A Review of Concepts, Research and Practice

By: Carroll, AB; Carroll, Archie B.; Shabana, KM

Volume: 12 Issue: 1 Pages: 85-105

Abstract
In this review, the primary subject is the 'business case' for Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR). The business case refers to the underlying arguments or rationales supporting or documenting why the business community should accept and advance the CSR ‘cause’. The business case is concerned with the primary question: What do the business community and organizations get out of CSR? That is, how do they benefit tangibly from engaging in CSR policies, activities and practices? The business case refers to the bottom-line financial and other reasons for businesses pursuing CSR strategies and policies. In developing this business case, the paper first provides some historical background and perspective. In addition, it provides a brief discussion of the evolving understandings of CSR and some of the long-established, traditional arguments that have been made both for and against the idea of business assuming any responsibility to society beyond profit-seeking and maximizing its own financial well-being. Finally, the paper addresses the business case in more detail. The goal is to describe and summarize what the business case means and to review some of the concepts, research and practice that have come to characterize this developing idea.

Corporate Social Responsibility
Evolution of a Definitional Construct

Archie B. Carroll
University of Georgia

Abstract
There is an impressive history associated with the evolution of the concept and definition of corporate social responsibility (CSR). In this article, the author traces the evolution of the CSR construct beginning in the 1950s, which marks the modern era of CSR. Definitions expanded during the 1960s and proliferated during the 1970s. In the 1980s, there were fewer new definitions, more empirical research, and alternative themes began to mature. These alternative themes included corporate social performance (CSP), stakeholder theory, and business ethics theory. In the 1990s, CSR continues to serve as a core construct but yields to or is transformed into alternative thematic frameworks.

The second tab in the homepage of the University Library system allows you to search a list of e-journal titles (a page describing the resource is accessible from the menu above).

This kind of search is particularly useful when you already have quite exact references. Just type the title of the journal you are looking for in the box, then click on the search button.
The button opens up a new page, containing details on the availability of the journal.

The online version of this journal is available starting from 1999: by filling in the boxes with your references (year, volume, issue, start page) you will be able to download the article from the journal homepage, where you will also be redirected by clicking on and leaving the boxes white.
The journal homepage will let browse the journal by issue, or search inside the journal for a specific topic
